

HEAVENLY ASCENT IN JEWISH AND PAGAN TRADITIONS

The NT contains numerous references to heavenly ascent or rapture: for example, the transfiguration (Mk 9:2–8 par.); the ascension (Lk 24:50–3; Acts 1:1–12; cf. 2:34; Jn 3:13–14; 6:62; 20:17; Phil 2:6–11; Eph 4:8–10; Rev 12:5); the rapture of the church to meet the Lord in the air (1 Thess 4:17; cf. 1 Cor 15:51–52); Paul's ascent into third heaven/paradise (2 Cor 12:2–4); Enoch's rapture (Heb 11:5; cf. Gen 5:24). The list grows longer if we include NT texts that presuppose the ascension (e.g., Mk 14:62).

It is possible in this article merely to adumbrate the enormous primary and secondary literature that may be relevant to the various NT texts (see most recently Zwiep). This situation is aggravated by the fact that heavenly ascent is a widespread motif in both Greco-Roman and Jewish sources of many different kinds. Hence the question frequently arises whether the NT references to ascent are to be characterized as Jewish, non-Jewish or a combination of both. A full discussion of the primary source materials, including ancient Near Eastern parallels (e.g., Assmann) and form-critical analysis, remains a desideratum. Additional work is also needed on cosmological assumptions on which the spatial orientation of ascent texts are based (Colpe). What accounts, for example, for the inverted orientation in the Hekhalot literature, where one is said to "descend to the Merkabah" (Kuyt; Stroumsa)?

1. Greco-Roman Background

2. Jewish Background

1. Greco-Roman Background

K. Luck-Huyse's recent study on the dream of flying in antiquity includes ascent texts from the most prominent Greco-Roman sources. It will suffice here to mention only a few categories of this voluminous and diverse material.

1.1. Ascent as Apotheosis. In Greco-Roman sources, the gods are frequently portrayed as ascending into heaven. In the Rhapsodic Theogony, for example, Zeus is said to have been carried into heaven on the back of a goat (West). Euhermeros claimed that gods such as Uranos, Kronos and Zeus were humans who had subsequently been apotheosized (Diododorus Siculus Bib. Hist. 13.1–17.2). Deification of a mortal hero or ruler was a common idea in the Hellenistic world. Alexander the Great himself was thought to have been granted apotheosis. Later the idea was accepted by Roman emperors as a posthumous ceremony, although Gaius emphasized his own divinity even before death. The deified emperor was endowed with the title divus (divine), and his ascent to heaven was symbolized by various signs, such as an eagle or a chariot (see Ruler Cult). The Arch of Titus in Rome, for instance, depicts the emperor being carried into heaven on the back of an eagle (Pfanner).

Apollonius of Tyana, a Neo-Pythagorean holy man who has often been compared to Jesus, led the life of an ascetic wandering teacher, endured persecution under Nero and Domitian, and finally ascended into heaven (Philostratus Vit. Ap. 8.29–30). He was the object of a posthumous cult attracting the patronage of the Severan emperors (Koskenniemi).

Stanley E. Porter and Craig A. Evans, Dictionary of New Testament Background: A Compendium of Contemporary Biblical Scholarship (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 2000).

1.2. Ascent and Shamanism. Shamanism is a widespread phenomenon in the ancient world. The shaman can be described as “a social functionary who, with the help of guardian spirits, attains ecstasy in order to create a rapport with the supernatural world on behalf of his group members” (Hultkrantz). This ecstatic state usually involves the perception that the soul of the shaman is ascending or descending to levels outside of mundane reality. For instance, Parmenides (DK 28 B 1) used shamanistic imagery in his philosophical poem, speaking of a cosmic chariot journey of the will, through the gates of Day and Night, to consult a goddess. The seven stages of the shaman’s journey to heaven are represented by seven tiers or notches in a pillar or tree, which stood for an imagined column at the center of the world (Schibli; West).

1.3. Ascent of the Soul After Death. Cicero’s Somnium Scipionis regards ascent to the stars as the destiny of the good soul after death (Cicero De Rep. 6.9–26; cf. Plato Tim. 41d-e).

2. Jewish Background

In Jewish sources, it is often difficult to ascertain whether an ascent text is the product of mystical experience, exegetical speculation or both. Sometimes an explicitly visionary experience can be described in terms of a bodily ascent (1 Enoch 14:8). Occasionally the texts themselves register doubt about whether the ascent is in the body or out of the body (2 Cor 12:2–4; Schäfer 1981, §680). The goal of heavenly ascent varies widely in Jewish sources—anything from apotheosis (see below) to reconnaissance of the inhabited world (T. Abr. 9:8) to understanding the inscrutable ways of God (4 Ezra 4:8). Sometimes the individual initiates ascent; at other times God or an angel does so. In the process of ascending, a person may receive priestly vestment (Himmelfarb), or one’s body may undergo transformation into a purified angelic form of fire or light (Morray-Jones 1992). Ascension seems to be an exclusively male prerogative among humans.

2.1. Ascent in the Old Testament. Several texts seem to refer to ascension in the OT (Schmitt). In Genesis 5:24, Enoch is said to have “walked with God,” which may refer to an ascent prior to his final translation, when “God took him.” This is how later Jewish and Christian sources interpreted the account (e.g., Philo Quaest. in Gen. 1.86; Wis 4:10–11; 1 Clem. 9.3; Tg. Neof. to Gen 5:24; 1 Enoch 71:16; 93:8; 2 Enoch 68:1; Pseudo-Clementine Recognitions 1.52.5; see Enoch, Books of).

The builders of the tower of Babel wanted to build a tower whose top was in the heavens (Gen 11:4). This was frequently interpreted to mean that the builders wanted to ascend into heaven (e.g., Jub. 10:19; Sib. Or. 3:100; Josephus Ant. 1.4.3 §118).

According to the narrative in Exodus 24, Moses, together with Aaron, Nadab, Abihu and the seventy elders, “went up and they saw the God of Israel” (Ex 24:9–10). Moses was given “the tablets of stone, with the law and the commandment, which I have written for their instruction” (Ex 24:12). In Deuteronomy 30:12, Moses insists that the divine commandment is neither too difficult nor too far away: “It is not in heaven that you should say, ‘Who will go up to heaven for us, and get it for us so that we may hear it and observe it?’” When we put these texts together, it is understandable why later Jewish tradition regarded Moses’ ascent to receive the law on Mt. Sinai as an ascent into heaven and an encounter with the Merkabah throne-chariot of God (cf. Ps 68:19 and the tradition based on it; Halperin).

Stanley E. Porter and Craig A. Evans, Dictionary of New Testament Background: A Compendium of Contemporary Biblical Scholarship (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 2000).

Standing in the line of the greatest prophet Moses, the other Hebrew prophets are frequently said to have had visions of the divine throne, although their ascent into heaven is never described. These visions have a twofold purpose: to establish the authority and legitimacy of the prophet as an intermediary between heaven and earth and to provide revealed information.

Psalm 110:1 can be interpreted to mean that the Davidic king is exalted and enthroned in heaven next to God himself: “The LORD says to my lord, ‘Sit at my right hand until I make your enemies your footstool.’” This passage, together with Isaiah 6, Ezekiel 1 and Daniel 7, later gave rise to further mystical speculation about the divine Merkabah, including accounts of individuals who ascended to heaven (e.g., 1 Enoch 14; Apoc. Abr. 17; Jos. and As. 17:7–8; T. Abr. 11; Rev 4; 2 Enoch 22; see further 4Q530 2:16–19). Elijah’s ascension into heaven and his expected return at the end of time also played a significant role in Jewish tradition (cf. 2 Kings 2:1–18; Mal 3:2–3; 1 Enoch 89:52; Sir 48:9–12; 1 Macc 2:58).

2.2. Ascent of the Soul After Death. W. Bousset suggested that the ascent of the visionary is an anticipation of the ascent of the soul after death, an idea that is found in many apocalypses of the Christian era (Himmelfarb 1991). The language of 1QH 3:19–20 is suggestive in this regard: “I thank you, Lord, for you have redeemed my life from the pit and from Sheol of the dead; you have raised me up to an eternal height.” Possible parallels to the aforementioned Ciceronian passage can be found in Daniel 12:3 and Matthew 13:43. In the first-century Similitudes of Enoch (1 Enoch 71:16) and in the second-century, Jewish-Christian source in Pseudo-Clementine Recognitions 1.27–71 (1.52.5), Enoch is a model for all those who have pleased God and are similarly translated into heaven and are being preserved for the kingdom of God (see also Philo Quaest. in Gen. 1.86).

2.3. Ascent as Apotheosis. The ascension and deification of a mortal is found in the early Jewish literature of both Palestine and the Diaspora (Collins 1995). The Egyptian Diaspora features the apotheosis of Moses in several writings. For example, the Exagoge of Ezekiel the Tragedian, written in the second century B.C., describes Moses’ ascent to Mt. Sinai and his enthronement in heaven. The figure on the throne on high abdicates his throne and beckons Moses to sit on it (Exag. 68–76), thereby conferring upon Moses universal sovereignty (Exag. 77–78, 85–89). Philo of Alexandria also describes the apotheosis of Moses (Philo Vit. Mos. 1.158; cf. Borgen).

The apotheosis of Moses was evidently known also in Palestine. In a text from Qumran \(4Q491 Frag. 11 i 11–18\); cf. Smith; Hengel), the author (not an angel) claims to have ascended into heaven, to have received the “mighty throne in the congregation of the gods” and to have been “reckoned with the Stanley E. Porter and Craig A. Evans, Dictionary of New Testament Background: A Compendium of Contemporary Biblical Scholarship (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 2000).

gods.” J. J. Collins suggests that this text was written by someone who held the office of teacher or interpreter of the law and who understood himself either as a new Moses or a complement of Moses. Like Moses, this teacher in the late first century B.C. saw himself enthroned in the heavens and issuing teachings and rulings of irresistible power. Related materials have been observed in 4Q427, 4Q458 and 4Q471 (cf. Abegg; Schuller).

According to Theophilus of Antioch (Autol. 2.24), a second-century, Jewish-Christian apologist who makes extensive use of Jewish traditions, apotheosis was God’s original intention for humans. When God created man, he “transferred him out of the earth from which he was made into paradise, giving him an opportunity for progress so that by growing and becoming mature, and furthermore having been declared a god, he might also ascend into heaven (for man was created in an intermediate state, neither entirely mortal nor entirely immortal, but capable of either state), possessing immortality.” Perhaps Theophilus viewed Jesus as a second Adam who follows a similar course of exaltation to that of the first (cf. Grant).

From another perspective, however, apotheosis can be seen as a presumptuous invasion of heaven. In Isaiah 14:12–20, the prideful king of Babylon, who wants to ascend to heaven and become like God, is cast down to the underworld (Is 14:11). D. J. Halperin discusses the rabbinic tradition based on this passage (e.g., b. Hag. 13a). P. Borgen finds the tradition of ascension as invasion of heaven already in Philo of Alexandria.

2.4. Ascent as Legitimation of a Revelatory Mediator. Ascent provides a vehicle for divine revelation and a means by which to legitimate the revelatory mediator. In the Book of Watchers (1 Enoch 1–36), for example, the heavenly ascent of Enoch to the divine throne (1 Enoch 14) has a revelatory aspect similar to the call visions of the Hebrew prophets. For 1 Enoch the ascent establishes Enoch’s legitimacy and authority as mediator between heaven and earth, as well as providing revealed information. 4QLevi^b ar \(4Q213a\) 2:13–18 describes a vision that Levi received after praying. This vision is not found in the Greek Testament of Levi (see Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs). Instead, we find a more extensive ascent account in a dream vision (T. Levi 2:5–5:7), which is evidently designed to confirm the priesthood of Levi and to communicate divine revelation. Philo of Alexandria provides an autobiographical account of his own heavenly journey in De Specialibus Legibus 3.1–2 (Borgen). This ascent equips Philo not only to read the laws of Moses but also “to peer into each of them and unfold and reveal what is not known to the multitude” (Philo Spec. Leg. 3.6). The well-known story of the Four Who Entered Paradise, which is found both in the Talmud and in Hek-halot literature (cf. Morray-Jones), tells how only Rabbi Aqiba was deemed worthy of beholding God’s glory behind the curtain. J. R. Davila (1996) has recently suggested that this story is reflected in a Qumran text (1QH 16:4–26).

2.5. Ascent as a Periodization of History. In the apocalyptic section of the Apocalypse of Abraham (9–32), which is a midrash on Abraham’s vision in Genesis 15, the length of time that the elect are expected to suffer under foreign domination is expressed in terms of a cryptic chronology of four “ascents” (Apoc. Abr. 28:2–5; cf. 27:3). We may compare the rabbinic interpretation of Jacob’s dream in Genesis 28:12 (Lev. Rab. 29:2; Pesiq. Rab Kah. 23), according to which the angels of God ascending and Stanley E. Porter and Craig A. Evans, Dictionary of New Testament Background: A Compendium of Contemporary Biblical Scholarship (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 2000).

descending on the ladder to heaven are the guardian angels of the nations of the world who preside over the rise and fall of their respective empires. The number of rungs ascended represents the number of years that each of these empires reigned before their decline. Thus, Jacob saw Babylon ascend 70 rungs; Media, 52 rungs; Greece, 180 rungs; and Edom (Rome), an unknown number of rungs (cf. Kugel; Gafni).

2.6. Communal Aspects of Ascent. J. R. Davila (1994) argues that the later Hekhalot literature, which developed in part from traditions found in Second Temple apocalyptic literature, functioned in the context of a community: the shaman intermediary ascended or descended to the Merkabah, in order to create rapport with the supernatural world on behalf of his group. Other evidence suggests perhaps a more direct participation of the community in heavenly ascent or at least contemplation of the Merkabah. Halperin emphasizes that Merkabah speculation was well established in synagogue worship. According to H. Schreckenberg and K. Schubert, the zodiac signs in the synagogues of Hammath Tiberias and Beth Alpha are symbols, as in Hekhalot texts, for the ascension of the worshiper through the seven heavenly “palaces” (hekhalot) to the throne of God. The Songs of the Sabbath Sacrifice from Qumran Caves 4 and 11 have demonstrated that participation in the heavenly liturgy was the goal of worshipers already in the Second Temple period (Newsom).

See also MYSTICISM.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. M. G. Abegg Jr., “Who Ascended to Heaven? 4Q491, 4Q427 and the Teacher of Righteousness,” in Eschatology, Messianism and the Dead Sea Scrolls, ed. C. A. Evans and P. W. Flint (Grand Rapids, MI: Eerdmans, 1997) 61–73; J. Assmann, “Himmelsaufstieg,” Lexikon der Ägyptologie 2 (1977) 1205–11; P. Borgen, “Heavenly Ascent in Philo: An Examination of Selected Passages,” in The Pseudepigrapha and Early Biblical Interpretation, ed. J. H. Charlesworth and C. A. Evans (JSUP 14; Sheffield: JSOT, 1993) 246–68; A. B. Bosworth, “Alexander, Euripides and Dionysius: The Motivation for Apotheosis,” in Transitions to Empire: Essays in Greco-Roman History, 360–146 B.C., in Honor of E. Badian, ed. R. W. Wallace and E. M. Harris (Oklahoma Series in Classical Culture 21; Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1996) 140–66; W. Bousset, “Die Himmelsreise der Seele,” Archiv für Religionswissenschaft 4 (1901) 136–69; J.J. Collins, “A Throne in the Heavens,” in The Scepter and the Star: The Messiahs of the Dead Sea Scrolls and Other Ancient Literature (ABRL; New York: Doubleday, 1995) 138–53; idem, “A Throne in the Heavens: Apotheosis in Pre-Christian Judaism,” in Death, Ecstasy and Other Worldly Journeys, ed. J. J. Collins and M. Fishbane (Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1995) 43–58; C. Colpe, “Himmelfahrt,” RAC (1991) 212–19; M. J. Edwards, “Flight of the Mind,” OCD (3d ed., 1996) 601; J. R. Davila, “The Hekhalot Literature and Shamanism,” SBLSP 33 (1994) 767–89; idem, “The Hodayot Hymnist and the Four Who Entered Paradise,” RevQ 17 (1996) 457–77; C. A. Evans, “Ascending and Descending with a Shout: Psalm 47:6 and 1 Thessalonians 4:16,” in Paul and the Scriptures of Israel, ed. C. A. Evans and J. A. Sanders (JSNTSup 83; Sheffield: JSOT, 1993) 238–53; idem, “Jesus and the Messianic Texts from Qumran: A Preliminary Assessment of the Recently Published Materials,” in Jesus and His Contemporaries: Comparative Studies (AGJU 25; Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1995) 83–154; I. Gafni, “Concepts of Periodization and Causality in Talmudic Literature,” Jewish History 10 (1996)

Stanley E. Porter and Craig A. Evans, Dictionary of New Testament Background: A Compendium of Contemporary Biblical Scholarship (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 2000).

21–38; A. Goshen-Gottstein, “Four Entered Paradise Revisited,” HTR 88 (1995) 69–133; R. M. Grant, ed. and trans., Theophilus of Antioch (Ad Autolycum; Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1970); N.R. Gulley, “Ascension of Christ,” ABD 1:472–74; D. J. Halperin, The Faces of the Chariot: Early Jewish Responses to Ezekiel's Vision (TSAJ 16; Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 1988); W. H. Harris III, The Descent of Christ: Ephesians 4:7–11 and Traditional Hebrew Imagery (AGJU 32; Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1996); M. Hengel, “'Sit at My Right Hand!' The Enthronement of Christ at the Right Hand of God and Psalm 110:1” in Studies in Early Christology (Edinburgh: T & T Clark, 1995) 119–225; M. Himmelfarb, Ascent to Heaven in Jewish and Christian Apocalypses (New York and Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1993); idem, “The Practice of Ascent in the Ancient Mediterranean World,” in Death, Ecstasy and Other Worldly Journeys, ed. J. J. Collins and M. Fishbane (Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1995) 123–37; idem, “Revelation and Rapture: The Transformation of the Visionary in the Ascent Apocalypses,” in Mysteries and Revelations: Apocalyptic Studies After the Uppsala Colloquium, ed. J. J. Collins and J. H. Charlesworth (Sheffield: JSOT, 1991) 89–102; A. Hultkrantz, “A Definition of Shamanism,” Temenos 9 (1973) 25–37; H.-J. Klauck, “Die Himmelfahrt des Paulus \(2 Kor 12:2–4\) in der koptischen Paulusapokalypse aus Nag Hammadi \(NHC V/2\),” SNTU 10 (1985) 151–90; E. Koskenniemi, Apollonios von Tyana in der neutestamentlichen Exegese (WUNT 2.61; Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 1994); J. Kugel, “The Ladder of Jacob,” HTR 88 (1995) 209–27; A. Kuyt, The "Descent" to the Chariot: Towards a Description of the Terminology, Place, Function and Nature of the Yeridah in Hekhalot Literature (TSAJ 45; Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 1995); K. Luck-Huyse, Der Traum vom Fliegen in der Antike (Palingenesia 62; Stuttgart: Franz Steiner, 1997); R. Mondi, “The Ascension of Zeus and the Composition of Hesiod's Theogony,” GRBS 25 (1984) 325–44; C.R. A. Morray-Jones, “The 'Descent to the Chariot' in Early Jewish Mysticism and Apocalyptic,” in Mapping Invisible Worlds, ed. G. D. Flood (Cosmos 9; Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 1993) 7–21; idem, “Paradise Revisited \(2 Cor 12:1–12\): The Jewish Mystical Background of Paul's Apostolate, Part 1: The Jewish Sources,” HTR 86 (1993) 177–217; idem, “Paradise Revisited \(2 Cor 12:1–12\): The Jewish Mystical Background of Paul's Apostolate, Part 2: Paul's Heavenly Ascent and Its Significance,” HTR 86 (1993) 265–92; idem, “Transformational Mysticism in the Apocalyptic-Merkabah Tradition,” JJS 43 (1992) 1–31; C. Newsom, Songs of the Sabbath Sacrifice: A Critical Edition (HSS 27; Atlanta: Scholars Press, 1985); G. C. Nicholson, Death as Departure: The Johannine Descent-Ascent Schema (SBLDS 63; Chico, CA: Scholars Press, 1983); M. Pfanner, Der Titusbogen (Beiträge zur Erschließung hellenistischer und kaiserlicher Skulptur und Architektur 2; Mainz am Rhein: Philipp von Zabern, 1983); C. Rose, Die Wolke der Zeugen: Eine exegetisch-traditionsgeschichtliche Untersuchung zu Hebräer 10:32–12:3 (WUNT 2.60; Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 1994) 178–91; C. Rowland, “Apocalyptic, Mysticism and the New Testament,” in Geschichte—Tradition—Reflexion: Festschrift für Martin Hengel zum 70. Geburtstag, Bd. I: Judentum, ed. P. Schäfer (Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 1996) 405–30; P. Schäfer, “New Testament and Hekhalot Literature: The Journey into Heaven in Paul and in Merkabah Mysticism,” JJS 35 (1984) 19–35; idem, Synopse zur Hekhalot-Literatur (TSAJ 2; Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 1981); H. S. Schibli, Pherekydes of Syros (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1990); A. Schmitt, Entrückung—Aufnahme—Himmelfahrt: Untersuchungen zu einem Vorstellungsbereich im Alten Testament (2d ed.; FzB 10; Stuttgart: KBW, 1976); H. Schreckenberg and K. Schubert, Jewish Historiography and Iconography in Early Medieval Christianity (CRINT 3.2; Assen: Van Gorcum; Minneapolis: Fortress, 1992) 167–68; E.

Stanley E. Porter and Craig A. Evans, Dictionary of New Testament Background: A Compendium of Contemporary Biblical Scholarship (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 2000).

Schuller, “A Hymn from a Cave Four Hodayot Manuscript: 4Q427 7 i + ii,” JBL 112 (1993) 605–28; J. M. Scott, “Throne-Chariot Mysticism in Qumran and in Paul,” in Eschatology, Messianism and the Dead Sea Scrolls, ed. C. A. Evans and P. W. Flint (Grand Rapids, MI: Eerdmans, 1997) 101–19; idem, “The Triumph of God in 2 Cor 2:14: Additional Evidence of Merkabah Mysticism in Paul,” NTS 42 (1996) 260–81; A. F. Segal, “Heavenly Ascent in Hellenistic Judaism, Early Christianity and the Environment,” ANRW 2.23.2 (1980) 1333–94; idem, “Paul and the Beginning of Jewish Mysticism,” in Death, Ecstasy and Other Worldly Journeys, ed. J. J. Collins and M. Fishbane (Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1995) 95–122; T. Silverstein and A. Hilhorst, Apocalypse of Paul: A New Critical Edition of Three Long Latin Versions (Cahiers d’Orientalisme 21; Geneva: Cramer, 1997); M. Smith, “Ascent to the Heavens and Deification in 4QM^a,” in Archaeology and History in the Dead Sea Scrolls: The New York University Conference in Memory of Yigael Yadin, ed. L. H. Schiffman (JSPSup 2; Sheffield: JSOT, 1990) 181–88; idem, “Two Ascended to Heaven—Jesus and the Author of 4Q491,” in Jesus and the Dead Sea Scrolls, ed. J. H. Charlesworth (ABRL; New York: Doubleday, 1992) 290–301; G. G. Stroumsa, “Mystical Descents,” in Death, Ecstasy and Other Worldly Journeys, ed. J. J. Collins and M. Fishbane (Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1995) 139–54; J. D. Tabor, “Heaven, Ascent to,” ABD 3:91–94; idem, Things Unutterable: Paul’s Ascent to Paradise in Its Greco-Roman, Judaic and Early Christian Contexts (Studies in Judaism; Lanham, MD: University Press of America, 1986); J. D. Turner, “The Gnostic Threefold Path to Enlightenment: The Ascent of Mind and the Descent of Wisdom,” NovT 22 (1980) 324–51; M. L. West, The Orphic Poems (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1983); E. R. Wolfson, “Visionary Ascent and Enthronement in Hekhalot Literature,” in Through a Speculum That Shines: Vision and Imagination in Medieval Jewish Mysticism (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1994) 74–124; A. W. Zwiep, The Ascension of the Messiah in Lukian Christology (NovTSup 87; Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1997).

J. M. Scott